Let's Talk About Sexual Health: Aboriginal Focus

Let's Talk About Sexual Health: Aboriginal Focus is a practical two-day course for anyone working directly with Aboriginal people. It helps build the confidence, knowledge, and skills needed to have safe, inclusive, and evidence-based conversations about sexual health and relationships.

On completion of this course, you will have:

- have an increased level of confidence working with Aboriginal communities in the area of sexual health
- have a better understanding of cultural/community sensitivities and how to engage clients in the topic of sexual health
- understand the impacts of colonisation and generational trauma
- be able to identify the sexual health issues faced by Aboriginal people and more.

This course is only suitable for people who work directly with Aboriginal people or are undertaking studies with an Aboriginal focus.
